Atsushi Sakahara    Japan    113'    Documentary

Badly injured during the 1995 Tokyo metro sarin gas terrorist attack by the doomsday cult Aum, director Atsushi Sakahara embarks on an intimate and exacting journey with the cult's executive Hiroshi Araki to record the parallel life paths of the victim and perpetrator.

Recut over the last year by editor Junko Watanabe, this deep dive into the trauma of terrorism and cult rhetoric through the very ordinary journey of two people is finally ready to meet its audience.

Teenager Janaki and her scrawny paramour visit the city behind her mother's back. He's arranged for a ride from his boss, a sullen man who tells Janaki that he knows she's lied to her mother. The trio drive into the city where the teenagers are besotted with the lights, the malls and the beach. They lose track of time and are forced to stay the night in a bare-bones motel where things take a turn for the worse. A magic realist portrait of India's growing pains from the director of SEXY DURGA, Sanal Kumar Sasidharan returns in his biggest production yet with Malayalam powerhouse performers Joju George and Nimisha Sajayan.
